LEONARD SALTONSTALL, United States Senator from Massachusetts, and the Right Reverend Robert R. Strickler, Bishop of West Virginia, were announced as of 1948 at the bicentennial and commencement exercises on June 6.

In announcing these speakers, Dr. John E. Pomfret, president of the college, remarked that the college realized pleasure to these addresses since these addresses included two days of visits. Specialists will give an introductory lecture, followed by morning and afternoon seminars on the following topics:

- Practical application of all techniques in the Field Artillery in World War I, to the practice law in Boston. Saltonstall’s rise in political affairs is due to his work as a lawyer in the Massachusetts House of Representatives, serving there for 14 years, and as speaker from 1933-1936. Becoming governor of Massachusetts in 1936, he was termed three terms.

Thomas Mitchell. The new members of the faculty and the two coordinator assistants will bring their program to the platform for a reading of the descriptive biographies. A plaque will be unveiled at the conclusion of the ceremony, which will be attended by the scholar, Althea Hunt, director of the Institute, who will give instructions and directions.

Robert Edmund Jones, producer-director of the Daily Flat Hat, will address the class of 1948 at the Baccalaureate and commencement exercises on June 6.

Lb. Moore Discusses New Attendance Rule

Regulation Won't Affect Class Cutting

The liberal regulation concerning class attendance made recently by the faculty came as a surprise to many professors. Many professors feel that such a regulation is not necessary. The rules as they are now written, have been in effect for some time and have been accepted by the students. The new rule states that a student cannot miss more than three cuts in any one semester. This means that if a student misses a class three times, he will have to make good the missed classes and will receive a grade of "C" if he does so. If he cannot make good the missed classes, he will be given an "F" for the course. The new rule is expected to be in effect for the fall semester.

Mr. Moore, who is one of the professors, says that he does not think that the new rule will have a great effect on class attendance. He feels that the students will not be affected by the new rule because they have been used to it for so long. He also feels that the students will not be able to miss more than three cuts because they will be too busy with their studies.

There are, however, some professors who feel that the new rule will have a great effect on class attendance. They feel that the students will not be able to miss more than three cuts because they will be too busy with their studies. They also feel that the students will not be able to make up the missed classes because they will not have the time to do so.

In conclusion, the new rule concerning class attendance is expected to be in effect for the fall semester. It is expected to have a great effect on class attendance because the students will not be able to miss more than three cuts. However, there is some disagreement among the professors as to whether the new rule will have a great effect on class attendance.

The new William and Mary golf team has come back after a slow start to even their season's record. The spring semester has made a good showing, especially since this was their first year as an organized team since before the war.

In the season opener a more experienced team was matched against the College of the Holy Cross, coming off the ground,” judging his men in advance, "as they build up to build the speed of several of their stars, we found ourselves in a "big meets" during May. The result of this was that the Indians had to surmount the high placers in several events, the Tribe playing a substitute team for several events, the Indians playing a substitute team for several events.

The Tribe's season-long activities were in their matches against the University of Richmond. Besides the usual matches, the Tribe swept last week's contests, taking the Southern Conference tourney.

After all the sororities had finished their songs, the judges retired to make their decision and the sophomore class presented a radio skit, emceed by Bill Williams. Second honors went to Kappa Delta, third and fourth place to Phi Mu and Kappa Alpha Theta, and the first place winners were asked to sing their song again.

Dr. Fraser Neiman, associate professor of English, will be guest speaker at Chapel tomorrow night at 6:30 P. M.

Dr. Edgar Fulkin, Chapel director and speaker at the April 28th service, chose as the basis of his address the familiar benediction: "May the Lord watch between us while we are absent one from another." and compared its original biblical significance to the modern interpretation associated with it. In the same manner in which it was first said by Laban to Jacob, it was a recognition of man's weakness to prevent human associations from appeal to God to stand between him and his adversary to maintain peace. "It was a warning rather than a benediction," stated Dr. Fulkin.

Today, however, we have come to regard it erroneously as a request to God to strengthen the spiritual bond uniting people all over the world. The modern meaning is beloved to regard it erroneously as a request to God to strengthen the bond, "he was certain he had discovered "a new, appealing because it is so human," he said.

In concluding, Dr. Fulkin stated that in meaning Laban's quotation as a benediction--he was certain that he had discovered "a new, beautiful meaning in this old saying," one of which even Laben himself would approve. "May the Lord watch between us while we are absent one from another."

Or the Reserve Officers' Training Program at the Division was brought about according to Dr. John E. Pomfret, president of the college.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program, authorized by Secretary of the Army permit regulations, will begin operation on September 21, 1948, when the students begin their fall term.

The establishment of the ROTC unit at the Division was brought about when the results of a survey, conducted in Norfolk and Portsmouth high schools by Lewis W. Webb, Jr., director of the William and Mary extension, indicated there was sufficient demand for such an organization, according to Dr. Pomfret, president of the college.

Establishment of the ROTC unit at the Division was brought about when the results of a survey, conducted in Norfolk and Portsmouth high schools by Lewis W. Webb, Jr., director of the William and Mary extension, indicated there was sufficient demand for such an organization, according to Dr. Pomfret, president of the college.

The survey was made of seniors in five local high schools in Norfolk, and at Woodrow Wilson High School in Portsmouth. Of the total of 668 students contacted by Webb, 57 expressed a desire to attend the Norfolk Division and take ROTC training.

Moving to protect veterans in schools and colleges against "overdrawing" their G. I. Bill educational benefits, the Veterans Administration announced a tightening of controls on summer school attendance.

Under this plan, veteran intending to change schools for the summer must obtain two supplemental certificates of eligibility. One must be gotten before entering summer school and the second must be obtained before returning to the first school. These certificates show the amount of G. I. Bill education time to which an ex-service man is entitled.

Veterans planning a change of schools for summer study should obtain a supplemental certificate of eligibility now.

The second supplemental certificate of eligibility, for use by veterans when they re-enter their present schools in the fall, will include a computation of education time with the summer, period of study deducted. Veterans should apply for this by mid-summer. These certificates may be obtained by writing to the VA Regional Office having jurisdiction over the area in which a veteran is attending school. When requesting one, a veteran should give his full name and address as well as the claim number assigned by VA.

Buchanan Shines as Phrase-Hunting Shakespeare

By George Walter Knipp

Capping a strenuous and ambitious season with the final Theta Alpha Phi production, the William and Mary Players, under the deft guidance of Miss Hunt, resurrected two superior pieces of Juvenoisy from the hand of the old master, Shaw himself. The Dark Lady of the Somnrels opened the bill. In this piece Shaw assumes himself-and incidentally his audience—by pretending that the Shakespearian myth matches his most magical phrases from casual conversation, and banged them down into his notebook. The piece's phrase-hunting goes on amid a troubled love affair, an accidental assault on Queen Elizabeth, and edifying plots for a National Theatre—now at task on the verge of realization.

The Sonnets opened the bill. In this piece Shaw amuses himself in his struggle as William Shakespeare, and incidentally his audiences—by pretending that Shakespeare, by his make-up, his gay-nineties style to his spouse, Magnesia. As the jealous husband to homicide, Adolphus Bastable, who incites and Mary Players, under the deft direction as George Fitztollemache, the artist as a citizen and college graduate, Dean Jeffers advocated membership in the William and Mary Athletic Association and the American Association of University Women. She closed her brief address by offering best wishes to the graduates.

Entering President Jeanie Murphy announced that the William and Mary delegation to the state chapter of the Athletic Federation of College Women had been named to draw up a constitution for the new organization. The first convention of the state chapter will be held next year, and the president, corresponding secretary and faculty advisor of the group will be chosen from the William and Mary representatives. The WAA plans to sponsor a picnic for the freshman during orientation week, and also play hosts to the intercollegiate hockey tournament.

Hear Dr. Rowell
Speak On Homer

"The setting changes with the centuries, but the actors and actresses remain essentially the same," Dr. Henry T. Rowell, head of the classics department at Johns Hopkins University, told his listeners at the Spring celebration of Alpha of Virginia of Phi Beta Kappa, in Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall, last night.

Speaking on The Lesson of Homer, Dr. Rowell asserted that the ancients believed there was something in the study of Homer which would make one a good man. It was Homer's men and women of heroic stature who provided the moral lesson which Athenian gentlemen wanted their sons to get from Homer, Dr. Rowell declared.

Homer's works reflected the philosophy of the Greece of his day, according to Dr. Rowell. The immortality of the Iliad and Odyssey, the speaker asserted, was not immortality from the immoral Olympian deities, but an inner compulsion, the morality of integrity, which, even in death, kept Homer's heroes honorable.

Dr. Rowell was introduced by Dr. A. Pelzer Wagener, head of the ancient languages department. Prior to Dr. Rowell's address, Dr. Charles F. Marsh, vice-president of Alpha of Virginia of Phi Beta Kappa, welcomed the 38 new initiates. James Milne responded for the initiates. The initiation, held in the Great Hall of the Wren Building yesterday afternoon, was followed by an informal supper for the new initiates and officers of Alpha of Virginia, at the King and Kay Tea Room.
