Blaze Destroys Portion Of Vets Dorm; Extinguishers, Alarms Fail To Operate

By Ed Brown

Early morning flames of the second important fire in Williamsburg within a week and the state's second major college blaze within a month claimed a 100x60-foot section of Vets Dorm A on Richmond Road last Tuesday.

The fire alarm was turned in about 6 a.m. and, although most of the occupants were asleep, no injuries were reported. Eighteen volunteers and two pieces of apparatus of the local fire brigade responded to the call.

Firemen battled the blaze for an hour before quelling it. When the smoke cleared away it was seen that the burned section could be written off as a total loss. The affected portion housed bathing facilities, a lounge and the boiler room.

No Chairs Furnished

..No chairs furnished to sit on. The steps leading into the sunken garden, next to the Women's dormitory, will be reserved for house mothers.

The week end festivities will officially begin at 9:30 p.m. on Friday night, April 29, in Blower草坪, at which time a program consisting of eight-1/2-hour comedy skit program presented during the May Day week end.

Queens To Be Awarded

The state's next student selected for the fragrant crown of the May queen will be crowned Queen of the May Queen ceremony on Saturday, April 30, at 9:30 p.m. in the large cafeteria, Pagoda Room and the Wigwam.

King Has Films On His Brain

William and Mary Go-Round

Anybody know where I can get a haddock to try to catch a few into the Williamsburg Theatre? Many of these movies they've been making in the area for the past couple of years have been murder for me and the others have had difficulty keeping them off the market. It is such a strange form of luck to get a picture that tastes well for me. The picture is something that I think will be appreciated by a wide audience.

King

Take that bill I saw last week, the one that Eugene O'Neill intended the picture to be a tragedy, the boys of Baltimore. Now they're not expensive, but it was a triumph of theatrical ingenuity in its own right. It was tragic, all right. The only cut we did was to reverse the names of the people in the audience.

I should have been told by that gal who pinned crepe paper and the University of Virginia sit-ins. It expressed an ex-

The administration has signaled in making available information which should be the domain of the student government. The lack of official knowledge has contributed to the growth of the many rumors and confusion which the freshmen pick up with his doc cap, but he does not discard them with the doc cap. Someone knows the truth about the operation of the cafeteria, the construction of the fraternities, the operation of the Old Hugh House, the expenditure of the $15,000 to $20,000 in fines which the students shall pay to the city in the next year. It is a right of interest in such matters. We maintain that they not only have the right to know, but also the duty to find out.

It is also hard to see the students at certain colleges and practices. It is possible to inspect the fraternity lodges every week, to note such minute infractions as a dirty glass or ashtray, but yet the real story behind the fraternity social and alarm system would not work. A check of the Marshall-Wythe ex-

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

Several people have been kind enough to make comments on the decorations for the May Ball.

As chairmain of the decorating committee, I would like to thank the students for their suggestions and the names of the people who did the decorating. Also, I would like to thank all the students for the time and effort they put into making the dance a success.

First of all, Mrs. Hayes said that the color scheme would also be a good idea. The water fountain on the third floor Marshall-Wythe that apparently hadn't been used for a while was turned on.

What's to be done? Look around, listen, find out all you can.

Back the students, and I believe that the students and the faculty of the student body. When you become an alumnus, don't forget the college. Work for it.

Automatic Camera To Snap Graduates

Modern photography will play an important part in the forthcoming graduation of approximately 600 students at their June 11 exercises, when, along with a number of other colleges throughout the state, they will be individually photographed as they receive their diplomas from Dr. John E. Pomfret, president of the college.

Using a new, automatic camera, operated by remote control and synchronized with Strobe Speedlight, Arthur Clarke of Richmond, a Richmond photographer will put his 14 years of professional skill to work to provide a new photographic service to college and to the graduates.

The college will receive a complete set of the photographs either for its files or to be made available for publication in periodicals and home town newspapers. Students may order 5x7 photographs of themselves depicting this climax in their college careers.

SMOKE SIGNALS

William and Mary and the other Big Six schools of Virginia are currently suffering the stress of the NCAA because the board will not meet in the near future to consider the items brought by the members. The NCAA has not made any announcements at this time and some others, are not sure if the board will meet at all.

The primary meeting which has been set down for the 20th of this month, is at St. Louis where the Mizzou's football game will be played.

The present great amount of stress on the member colleges to give athletes only tuition and one meal per day, is unworkable.

If the schools do not sign, they would be available only to students who have given athletes jobs which actually amounted to sinecures or they could have falsified reports. Take your choice.

A code has been given Williams and Mary by the NCAA which don't amount to anything but an accurate picture.

If the schools do not sign, they would have the opportunity this week to participate in the NCAA conference, which would be available only to students who have given athletes jobs which actually amounted to sinecures or they could have falsified reports.

The code would allow the members colleges to give athletes only tuition and one meal per day. The training table system of feeding athletes during their seasons would be done away with. Any aid further than tuition would be available only to students during their seasons. A student's athletic achievement, which would mean study and better grades.

Athletes with average grades would have to work to fill in, what the aid would cover.

William and Mary and the other schools have been given until July 1 of this year to conform to the NCAA code. Williams and Mary never has agreed to the code as it is, and we believe that this school has been right in refusing to sign.

Schools which have agreed to the code and been punished because the NCAA officials have had several paths to follow in keeping the school from signing the code.

They could sign if the code were amended to allow the training table and to allow the college to interpret for itself where high school, college, and the state reside.

In a meeting May 28, William and Mary, the other Big Six schools and the others which have elected to act jointly with the school (Dartmouth, North Carolina, and George Washington) will decide whether to sign or to stick to the training table system.

William and Mary's golfers jumped back onto the victory track by capturing a whistleblow job to the Norfolk Division, 16-4 for their second victory in three matches so far this season. All matches have been at home.

Doug Weiland, number one man on Coach Pavy Groo's team, captured his 71 to take his match with Bill Kyler yesterday, and he was the outstanding performer of the day.

Bob Hendich shot a 77 to subdue Power of the Norfolk team, and William and Mary won the meet 15-5.

Mark McCormick went around in 14 to do Adams under by a 3-0 score, and Ward Donohue took the measure of Doug by another 3-0 count. William and Mary also won this best ball, 3-0.

The Invites took their first match from Ambush by a 17-6 score just before spring vacation.

Then last Saturday they dropped their only decision, losing to the University of Ohio at the Inn course, 15-5. Ambush also played well, at least matching the University of Richmond's efforts.

A little on the humorous side, there was a game of a man wearing the prominent New York sports writer who writes the Cholly Knickerbocker column in the New York Times. It seemed to be something of a character, and the tennis fans took him to heart immediately, as a natural trial, considering his great amount of color coupled with his reputation.

He was a bit of a tennis player too, as he reached the semi-finals in the men's singles with Sidney Eldredge, bowing to Kovaleski and Vogt.

Papooses Tracksters Prep Eagerly For Opener With Apprentice Team

Although somewhat hampered by poor weather and lack of men, we've had track practice every morning during the week and we're making good progress.

The first meet will be with the Apprentice School April 10th. This school is expected to afford the fresh men a stiff competition, but should prove very helpful in giving the boys some idea of what their opponent are progressing. Last month the Williams and Mary varsity cindermen drubbed the Apprentice School and the fresh men should call upon the track meet for moral encouragement.

Knox Ramsey and Ed Caughron, fresh track men, emphasized the need for moral encouragement and field event men. Caughron

William and Mary's baseball team fell yesterday to Kent State, 14-2. The Tribe were soundly thrashed by the first-place Yellow Jackets, 14-2. Bill Wardwell hurled a seven hit, errorless game, allowing no earned runs, and five runs. The Tribe had only four hits, and one of those was a two-run double by Olaf Hedman.

The Tribe scored their only run in the third inning on a home run by Korczowski. The rest of the game was a one-sided affair, with the Tribe only managing to put two men on base. Baker, who had a double in the previous game, had one hit this game, but was still unable to find his stroke.

The Tribe have had some success at the plate this season, with Baker leading the team in hits, and Korczowski having a .300 batting average. However, the rest of the team has struggled, with only a couple of players hitting over .200.

The Tribe are in a tough spot, as they are currently in last place in the conference and have only won two games this season. They will need to pick up their game if they hope to compete for the conference title.

Colonel Herbert Fitzroy Addresses Symposium On Changes In Culture

Colonel Herbert Fitzroy will address the Marshall Wythe Symposium again this Friday at 6 p.m. At the last meeting of the class, immediately before the spring vacation, Colonel Fitzroy took a look at world affairs through the eyes of the European visitor, dwelling as a basis for his discussion on "E. S. Ellis's View Toward the Definitions of Culture.

Colonel Fitzroy called the present period of change just one of many such periods. But the present one is quite unique, he pointed out, stating that the changes were so drastic in many cases that they might well be compared to mutations in the field of genetics.

Periods of Change

He outlined various periods of change, dividing them into three time divisions. The first came when man came down out of the trees to develop fire, tools and a language. Then his cultural development divided them into three time divisions. The first came when man discovered he could get power from heat, and the industrial revolution resulted.

The discovery of the scientific method, the essence of which is "never trust your own mind," was pointed out as an important factor in the development of man's learning. This method has caused apprehension about the security of man's use of it next year, Colonel Fitzroy stated. Such action is a direct move to meet the present challenge of the rapid growth of scientific knowledge.

Efficient Democracy

Man's main problems were listed as how to make democracy more efficient and effective and how to handle race and labor relations; the main problem does not rest in the physical sciences.

The committee must develop states, he said, in the same manner as to use the biological production.

Colonel Fitzroy said the culture traits of a nation are as definable as those of small, non-literate groups, such as have been studied. "In his day," he said, "cannibals are treated as common to all nations, he said.

In the discussion following last Thursday, a number of students said that the changes were so drastic in many cases that they might well be compared to mutations in the field of genetics.

Reviewer Declares 'Cheats of Scapin' Rollicking

By Peter Berrigan

The William and Mary Theatre, cooperating with the Williamsburg Restoration, presented last Saturday at the Williamsburg Reception Center in a week-end scheduled performances of The Cheats of Scapin, a Restoration comedy by Thomas Otway.

The play should be attended without fail by those interested in (1) seeing a good farce, (2) improving their knowledge of period plays, (3) watching David Friedman run the gamut of his small but extremely funny repertory of comedy techniques.

Double Plot

The Cheats, written in 1677, is apparently the result of a "triple play," a sort of Terrence to Molieres to Otway job. Although not to the original Molieres force of the same name, despite large chunks of dialogue lifted with perfect equanimity, The Cheats is still a rollicking, non-sentimental, charming little piece. The excellence of the present production of the same title, in large part, to the admirable direction of Howard Scammon. A magnificent costume designed by Mrs. Roger Sherman were another factor contributing to the success of the production.

Center Of Action

The play revolves around the machinations of the clever and unscrupulous Scapin to patch things up and bring matters to a successful conclusion. This he does with considerable éclat.

SCAPIN (JEFF FRIEDMAN) SCHEMES with Thrifty (Freddie Helfrich), while Shift (George Belk) listens on in a scene from 'The Cheats of Scapin.'

In the role of Gripe, father to Octavian and Leander, Richard Bethards was excellent. Mr. Bethards has a fine sense of timing, perfect diction, and a keen understanding of the demands of Restoration comedy technique. To his credit let it be said that he managed very well to hold his own in the scenes with the formidable Mr. Friedman.

Thrifty Convincing

As Thrifty, father to Octavian, Frederick Eckert provided a complete and amusing contrast to Mr. Bethards. He managed to create a convincing personality in the role of the honest, cowardly Thrifty.

John Donovan as Octavian and Chris Moe as Leander both employed a stylized gesture in keeping with the setting. Under the direction of David Friedman, they managed a restrained yet well-defined performance.

John Donovan as Octavian and Chris Moe as Leander both employed a stylized gesture in keeping with the setting, standard of that period. As falls for Scapin they managed a restrained yet well-defined performance.

Marianne Bruce and Mary Gerhardt, while appearing in the limited roles of Linda and Clara, were appropriately attractive. Miss Bruce's delivery of the Prologue was remarkable for its clarity and charm.

As Shift, the servant and willing tool of Scapin, George Belk could have done little more to improve that thankless role. The heartwarming play, played by Alfred Huffman and Alice Stewart of the William and Mary faculty, contributed little to the success of the evening.

Student Chemists To Present Exhibit

The Chemistry Club will hold its annual open house Friday, April 25, from 7:30 to 10 p. m. in Rogers Hall.

The magic show, one of the main attractions, will be presented at 9 p. m., under the direction of C. Dickenson and Fred Stiner.

Other features include the Geiger Counter, demonstrated by Mike Fletcher, and the Cathode Ray Tube, to be demonstrated by George Sandis, assistant professor of chemistry.

Several special experiments will be presented by the students in advanced laboratories.
