DEBBIE TAYLOR

Having guided the William and Mary women's basketball team through the best three-year stretch in program history, head coach Debbie Taylor enters her 10th year at the helm of the Tribe as the winningest coach in school history and on the cusp of earning her 100th career victory.

Under her direction, W&M has produced outstanding scholar-athletes both on the court and in the classroom. Last season was illustrative of this, with two players graduating with more than 1,000 career points and the Tribe reaching the quarterfinal round of the CAA Championships for the second year in a row.

One of the top players in the program's history, Kyra Kaylor's success throughout her career is a testament to Taylor's ability to recruit and develop outstanding talent. Kaylor graduated as the school's all-time leader in points (1,873) and rebounds (1,124), and also holds 11 other school records. The 2005-06 CAA Player of the Year, Kaylor was named first-team all-conference each of the last three years, and was awarded the prestigious Dean Ehlers Leadership Award last season, the first for any Tribe player male or female.

The Dean Ehlers award, first presented following the 2004-05 season, is named in honor of a former James Madison athletics director, and is awarded each year to a male and female basketball player in the CAA who best exemplifies the highest standards of leadership, integrity, and sportmanship both on and off the court.

Devin James also graduated last spring after helping lead the Tribe to average 16 wins over the final three years of her career. Surpassing the 1,000-point barrier in the first game of her senior campaign, James finished her career with 1,348 points, the fifth-highest total in school history.

Two returning players have been a large part of the Tribe's success and will be counted on by Taylor to ensure that the high-level of play characteristic of the team over the past several years continues in 2008-09. Courtney Portnell took, and made, more three-point shots than any other player in school history as a junior (72-193), including making seven of the high-reward shots in each of three consecutive games in December.

Tiffany Benson continued to build off of her outstanding freshman season with arguably an even more impressive season as a sophomore. Named to the all-defensive team, Benson recorded 58 blocks, ranking second both in the conference and on the Tribe's all-time season totals list. She also led the CAA with 139 offensive rebounds, and ranked fourth in the conference with 259 total rebounds.

The 2007-08 squad won 14 games, the third-straight season with double-digit wins, and between individual and team performances the squad set 20 school records. The win against Georgia State on January 17 made Taylor the winningest coach in school history with 93 career victories, and she would finish the season with 99 wins, setting the stage for a historic 2008-09.

In 2006-07, W&M won 19 games, the second-most in school history, and three members of the Tribe were recognized with all-conference honors. Highlighting the group was forward Kyra Kaylor, who was selected to the All-CAA First Team for the second consecutive season. Honored as the CAA Player of the Year as a sophomore, Kaylor proved to be one of the conference's elite players once again in 2006-07. The Pittsburgh, Pa., native averaged 14.8 ppg and 9.1 rpg, while ranking among the league's best in numerous categories.

Under Taylor's tutelage, forward Tiffany Benson had an outstanding rookie season and developed into one of the league's top defensive players, as she was chosen as a member of the CAA All-Rookie Team. An outstanding shot blocker, the Virginia Beach, Va., native established a single-season school record with 67 blocks, a total that ranked fourth on W&M's career list. Benson's selection marked the eighth time in the last nine years that one of Taylor's players has garnered all-rookie accolades.

While the honors poured in for its work on the hardwood, the Tribe also produced impressive results in the classroom. Guard Sarah Stroh distinguished herself by being named to the CAA All-Academic First Team for two consecutive years. Stroh started all 31 games for W&M at the point and ranked seventh in the conference in assists (3.8 apg). A steady player throughout her four years at the College, she finished her career as the school record holder for games played (115), which currently ranks third behind Kaylor (124) and James (119).

Undoubtedly, the individual honors were impressive, but what the team accomplished collectively during the 2006-07 season was far more significant. The Tribe posted the second-most victories in school history (19) to earn consecutive winning seasons for the initial time as a Division-I program. Additionally, W&M recorded 10 regular-season conference triumphs and secured consecutive double-digit league win totals for the first time. Statistically, the Tribe established itself as one of the nation's top defensive teams by limiting the opposition to just 35.5 percent shooting, a figure that ranked 13th in the country. Offensively, the squad was incredibly effective beyond the arc and ranked 23rd in three-pointers made per game (6.3) and 26th in three-point field goal percentage (36.0).

The success of 2006-07 built upon what was accomplished during the 2005-06 campaign. That edition of the Tribe earned the nation's second-best turnaround (+11 wins) and registered the program's best record at 15-13 since the 1998-99 season. Additionally, the Green and Gold's 11 conference victories were a school record, besting the previous mark of nine.

Many of the Tribe's accomplishments in 2005-06 were products of the hard work and dedication put in during the previous year. While the 2004-05 campaign was mired by a slew of injuries, it provided younger players with an immediate opportunity to gain valuable experience. Though the hard work did not lead to immediate results in the win column, Taylor's guidance played an integral role in building the foundation for the Tribe's success the following two seasons.

During the 2003-04 season, Tribe fans were witnesses to what lay ahead as Kaylor emerged as one of the league's top rookies. Despite the team's 11-20 record, Kaylor finished the season ranked among league leaders in scoring (10th), total rebounds (sixth), field goal percentage (fourth), steals (10th) and defensive rebounds (fourth). Her efforts did not go unrecognized, as she was a third-team All-CAA selection and was tabbed to the conference's all-rookie team.

Under Taylor's tutelage, guard Jen Sobota finished her career in 2003 as one of the top players in school history. Sobota broke nine school career records, including points scored with 1,511 and games played and started (113).

In 2002-03, Taylor's recruiting efforts landed the No. 30-ranked class in the nation. The group included Dominique Lewis, who was named to the CAA All-Rookie Team after finishing the year averaging 5.3 ppg and 4.4 rpg. Also in the class that started in 2002-03 was current assistant coach Lizzie Schiel, who graduated in 2006 ranked fifth or better in the school record books in six separate categories.

In 2001-02, Taylor's third season in Williamsburg, she guided the College to 12 wins for only the eighth time in school history. The run-and-gun offense produced 67.4 points per contest, third-highest in the league, up from a 47 points per game effort during Taylor's first year. For the third straight season, a Tribe freshman garnered all-rookie honors, as guard Kia Butts was selected to the team. Butts was also the Tribe's top man-to-man defender, drawing the assignment of the opponent's top scorer.

Along with Butts, the College's dynamic duo of guards Sobota and Jami Lange were the sparkplug behind the 12 wins, as the two "J's" were the only teammates in the CAA to finish the season in the top 10 in scoring. Sobota finished the year sixth in the league with a 13.8 scoring average, two-tenths of a point behind league player of the year Lucienne Berthieu, while Lange was the CAA's 10th-leading scorer at 13.3 points per game.

In her second year at the helm of the Tribe program, Taylor helped guide William and Mary to a number of firsts. For the initial time, the College placed three players on all-conference teams, with two players earning second-team All-CAA status (Jen Sobota, Quintina Walker) and a third to the all-rookie team (Ornit Shwartz). That was the first time since 1996 that a Tribe player had been selected to an All-CAA team. Also, W&M won its first CAA post-season game in five years, defeating VCU in the conference quarterfinals. Additionally, the squad had three CAA Player of the Week recipients, tying for the most in the league.

Taylor, a 1986 graduate of the College, is the fourth Tribe head coach since the program went to the Division I level in 1984.

"This is a very exciting time for Tribe women's basketball," Taylor said at the time. "This program has tremendous potential and we are just beginning to take off. We are really building something special here. It is exciting to work with and recruit the quality of student-athlete that the school attracts. I love our players. They are a great group of people with strong character and tireless work ethic. I am fortunate every day to be around such a unified group who have the ability to balance the demands of high level basketball and prestigious academics."

During her first season, Taylor implemented Team Tribe, a kids' club that provides fan support for women's basketball and volleyball. In nine years, Team Tribe has grown to more than 450 members.

According to Taylor, "Community support is vital to our team's success. Team Tribe provides our players with an opportunity to act as role models for young people in the Williamsburg area." She also believes that her players should maximize their education and potential both on and off the court.

"William and Mary basketball is about unity, about family, about personal growth," Taylor said. "It is the goal of the coaching staff to create an environment that provides an opportunity for our players to challenge themselves academically, athletically and personally. It is also our goal to build a national-caliber program with highly motivated student-athletes through which we will help reinforce and develop the skills necessary for their success after college."

A former Tribe letterwinner in both basketball and lacrosse, Taylor arrived in Williamsburg on June 1, 1999 after a two-year stint in the Southeastern Conference as an assistant coach at the University of South Carolina. While in Columbia, she organized and coordinated the Gamecocks recruiting efforts and worked with the Gamecock guards.

In 1998, under her direction, South Carolina signed the seventh-best recruiting class in the country according to the All-Star Girls Report, which included guard Shaunzinski Gortman, who was a first-round draft pick of the WNBA's Charlotte Sting in 2002. Gortman, one of the toughest man-to-man defenders in the country during her career, was the first SEC player selected in the draft that year.

That 1998 recruiting class led the Gamecocks to the Elite Eight of the NCAA Tournament as seniors in 2001-02 en route to posting a school-best 25-7 record and final ranking of sixth in the national polls. Taylor joined the South Carolina staff in April of 1997 after spending two years as an assistant coach at West Virginia University.

Upon graduation from William and Mary, Taylor accepted her first coaching position at Trinity Episcopal School in Richmond, Va. During her six seasons at TES, she won two conference titles and led the Titans to the 1991 Virginia League of Independent Schools championship.

In 1992, Taylor was hired as the assistant boy's varsity basketball coach at Goochland (Va.) High School. At that time she was one of only two females to coach boys' basketball in the state. She was promoted to head coach the following year and in

One of only two coaches in the CAA to coach players to win Player of the Year, Defensive Player of the Year, and the Dean Ehlers Leadership Award.
