House of Reps 27 June 1848.

Dear Sir,

I ought to have answered your last letter before this, but I accidentally mislaid it, and have to reply now from my recollection of its contents. It is as yet uncertain when Congress will adjourn. My opinion is, that we shall be here until the first of August, probably longer. It would afford me much pleasure to accompany Mrs. Holmes to the mountains on my return, but at this time I cannot make a positive promise, as I have always made it a rule of my life never to break a promise to the ladies. Let me know how long you expect to remain at Williamsburg. I had a conversation a few days ago upon the subject about which you wrote me some time since, the points we must present your claims to.
The bills continued to approut, but they will meet next month.

I have nothing new. I am very tired of the life of a Congressman, and should like to be free once more.

Your friend,

And. J. Fulton
