In the name of God Amen, I Lucy Dew of the County of King & Queen, State of Virginia, and widow of Thomas Dew, do make this my last will and testament as follows: 1st. I leave to my son Benjamin T. Dew, to have and bequeath the Portrait of my deceased son Thomas R. Dew.
3rd. I desire to leave all my bonds and money together with every other species of property I may have at my death, to be equally divided among all my grand children.
4th. I leave all my clothes to my three daughters-in-law.
5th. I leave my son Benjamin T. Dew, executor to this my last will and testament, without giving security or receiving commission for acting. Given under my hand and seal this 28th day of June 1855.

Lucy Dew

It is stated to me that the last date and in the 17th year 1857 having at that date 28 grand children; but that on the 2nd of December 1857 by them one month after her death, the wife of her son B. C. Dew had a child, born 2 Dew. I am asked whether under the clause he is to be regarded as one of the grand children and under to an equal share in the division of the property. My opinion is that he is to be so regarded. For although under such a clause the general rule is in that the rights of legates are determined at the testator's decease and children in residence at that time or legally competent so to be are alone entitled to participate in the benefits yet to be derived or more or less from general or special sources. Moreover, authority holds that "no human child born in sin will be entitled to all the privileges and advantages which they would have enjoyed if they had been actually born at the time their parents accord."
