Charles Duke Broadcasts Reasons For French Fall

In the third of a series of radio commentaries, Charles Duke asked the question: "Was the fall of France caused by democracy?" He felt it was not.

"...avoid the pitfalls which led to the downfall of France. It is not democracy which is the cause of the breakdown of the French government. It is the lack of leadership and the division of the people among themselves. The French government was divided into cliques of economic and social problems at home. This division made it impossible for the government to face aggression by foreign powers. The French government was not able to face the problems of the day because it was divided into cliques. The government was unable to provide the necessary leadership and unity that are essential for the survival of a nation.

In the end, the French government was unable to face the challenges of the day and the country fell.

Indians Must Stop Jones-Humbert Aerial Combination

State Crown At Stake In Turkey Brawl

20,000 Will See Tit for Tit

By BILL GARVE

Two state gridiron-rivals—Richmond and William and Mary—will be fighting for the state football title in the annual Turkey Brawl in the University of Richmond stadium Saturday night.

The great championship game, which is a worthwhile annual feature, will be a tit-for-tit affair on the football field. Both teams have outstanding records and are regarded as the two best teams in the Old Dominion.

The University of Richmond, which has a record of 6-0-2, will be trying to avenge last year's defeat by William and Mary.

The William and Mary cagers, who have a record of 5-1-1, will be trying to gain the championship for the first time in the history of the program.

The Indians are the greatest aerial combination in the Old Dominion, and it will be difficult for Richmond to stop them.

Richmond has few answers to the adept passing of Jones and Dick Humbert, surfboarders. Humbert, on one hand, has the ability to throw a dangerous pass; on the other, he can handle a dangerous fumble.
Inquiring Reporter

In great demand at a time when the liberal arts tradition is in the doldrums, a student at the University of Chicago is making a name for himself as an Inquiring Reporter. He is a member of the editorial staff of the student newspaper, "The Flat Hat." His work has attracted the attention of many on the campus, and he is gaining a reputation for his able research and writing.

"The Inquiring Reporter's" latest article, which appeared in the latest issue of "The Flat Hat," dealt with the question of the decline of the arts in American education. He pointed out that while many colleges are emphasizing science and technology, the humanities are suffering. He also discussed the importance of a well-rounded education and the need for a balance between the arts and sciences.

One Man's Guess

"In my opinion," the Inquiring Reporter said, "we are witnessing a crisis in education. The emphasis on practical training is taking away from the pursuit of knowledge for its own sake. This is a serious matter, and we need to address it before it is too late."

Cut Out the Rough Stuff

In the few days before the Field Hockey game is set to begin, there are many things that are happening on campus. The players are practicing, the fans are cheering, and the atmosphere is electric. This is the perfect time to enjoy the game and the spirit of competition that is so characteristic of college life.

Phili Bates, Apple-polish

A story on the front page of this week's "Flat Hat" carries the headline "The women's debate team finds that the only way to win is to win." The team consists of Phil Bates, who was selected as an apple-polisher, and an editorial on the page notes that in a high percentage of the North Carolina students put Phil Bates down. In Bates, William and Mary have found the "Biblical Girl Friend of the South," because they have not heard of a single, well-trained, left-handed woman who has been tortured around the campus, groups of students around the campus, groups of students who are left-handed, and the list goes on. Of course, Phil Bates is a horse-collared sophomore who has been tased around campus, and there are many things that are happening on campus. This is the perfect time to enjoy the game and the spirit of competition that is so characteristic of college life.

Team Gets Ready For The Thanksgiving Day Classic

Every week, the boys try hard and the known forty-colored bands of yellow, bright yellow-tipped out on the detachment field to show the coach and the team that they have time to stand, whether they win or not, and to help the others.

The coach drills them, trains them, corrects them, tells them, and they know. The jinx is almost gone, as the players can spot their mistakes and see the weaknesses.
