What to See in Williamsburg

Foundation of Colonial Capital at east end of Duke of Gloucester Street. Across the street from this to the north is the office building of the Secretary of the Colony. Not far from this building to the north is a part of the old colonial jail in which loyalists, including Governor Hamilton, of Detroit, were imprisoned.

On the site now occupied by Lane and Christian's store was the old Raleigh Tavern.

Opposite Mr. Hitchens' store is the site of the first printing office in Virginia. The court square is in the middle of the city. The old court house still stands, fronting on Duke of Gloucester Street.

Opposite the court house, and standing back from the street about 150 feet is the Powder Horn, built in 1715. The Palace Green is the street at right angles to the Duke of Gloucester Street. At the north end of this street near the site of the present school house stood the Colonial Governor's Palace.

On the east side of the Palace Green is the Audrey house, made famous by Mary Johnston's novel "Audrey, take a Note." The Audrey house is the site of the first theatre in the United States, built in 1716.

On the west side of the Palace Green, the first house north of Bruton Church is the house occupied by George Wythe.

On the corner of Duke of Gloucester Street and the Palace Green is Bruton Church, the present building having been erected in 1715.

On the north side of Duke of Gloucester Street and the Palace Green is the present building having been erected in 1715.

Northeast of the main building is the Brafferton Building erected in 1723. It was used at first as an Indian school, and later as the grammar school.

Northeast of the main building is the President's House built in 1718. It was occupied by Cornwallis in 1781, and by Lee in 1782. It has been rebuilt each time on the same foundation.

Southeast of the main building is the Brafferton Building erected in 1723. It was used at first as an Indian school, and later as the grammar school.

The Chapel of the college was built in 1732. In the vaults beneath are buried, Sir John Randolph, John Randolph, the Tory, Lord Botetourt, Peg- son Randolph, Bishop James Madison and wife, and others.

The library is east of the main building. It is the best collection of Colonial portraits in Virginia.

Greeting

As President of the College of William and Mary I extend to you, the faculty and students of the Summer Quarter, a most cordial welcome.

To those of us who love history and dream of the glory of the past, every inch of ground in this vicinity is sacred. But our visions of the past are not idle dreams, for they have furnished to the men and daughters of this institution inspiration for the future. Those who give serious thought to the teachings of this college go from its halls impelled by noble ideals of public service.

Make your residence be one which will bring you happiness and health. When the session has closed, you may return to your respective fields of endeavor feeling that you have profited by the days which you have spent at old William and Mary.

J. A. C. CHANDLER.

Entertainment and Recreation

Classes will not be conducted on Saturdays as a rule, leaving the week-ends free for recreation and enter­tainment.

Train schedules make it convenient to take shopping or sightseeing trips to Richmond, Newport News, Norfolk or Portsmouth and return the same evening. Excursions are frequently arranged to Buckeye Beach, Old Point Comfort, Hampton Institute, and Hampton Roads. Within easy reach are Fortress Monroe, Langley Aviation Field, Camp Ernst, the artillery camp and target range, the new Naval Mine Base, Newport Naval Hospital and Shipyard at Portsmouth, and the Newport News Shipyard, where the world's greatest dredge-draughts are under construction. Those who desire to participate in the drama will have the opportunity to visit Yorktown and Jamestown.

Special low auto rates will be arranged.

An interesting series of social events will be arranged.

Regular moving pictures of high grade will be shown at the Palace Theatre.

Outdoor sports — tennis, baseball, basketball, on the college courts and athletic field; games and fetes on the college grounds; and motor trips.

NOTICE

Fourth of July Celebration at the College

A local cast composed of students of the summer school and citizens of Williamsburg will present the first three acts of the drama "John Marshall," written by Edward J. White, Vice-President of the Missouri-Pacific Railway of St. Louis, on the Fourth of July. The author of the five-act drama will be here at the presentation by the local cast. There will be over a hundred performers who will participate in the dramatization. It is planned to have the drama filmed for the moving picture.

The first act shows a body of 100 men of Culpepper County gathered on a common, in May, 1778, to organize a military company. The man who had called the meeting had failed to appear. Consequently it was necessary to elect a leader, who became John Marshall. Scene two, three and four picture Washington's camp near Iron Hill, Pa., the battle of Brandywine, and the scene at Valley Forge, December 23, 1777 respectively. Act one gives us a vivid picture of the outbreak of the Revolution.

The second act opens with the scene in the home of Jacqueline Ambler, at Yorktown in 1780. Scene two pictures the ball at Yorktown and the meeting of John Marshall with Mary Ambler. Scene three represents the marriage of John Marshall to Mary Ambler, at John Marshall's home in Virginia, January 3, 1788.

The third act represents the Virginia Constitutional Convention of June 3, 1788, in which Patrick Henry makes his anti-constitutional argument. Scene two shows John Marshall pating his constitutional argument. This scene closes the first three acts, which the cast will present.

Thousands of spectators will witness the performance on the Fourth.

The callous editor, into whose presence the aspiring humorist had forced his way, handed back the latest batch of laugh-inspiring offerings.

"You editors," remarked the joke artist, "take life too damn seriously."

"On the contrary," retorted the editor, "I could take yours with positive glee."

Library Portraits
The portraits in the library could tell tales galore
Of deeds of other days and old and ancient lore.

If they wished to, they could tell us
What in other days befell,—
But these tales so rare could not compare
With the tales of today they could tell.

Of all the old collections
You're the best, men have agreed;
And then likewise those eagle eyes,
They also take the lead.

From their sightseeing point of vantage
On the library's four walls,
They could quickly relate histories up-to-date
Beside which the ancient kind falls.

And when the clock strikes ten at night,
They go to sleep tout de suite
To save, I dream, their vision keep
To see the next day's treat.—M. B. V.

WILLIAM AND MARY
You were born from the legends
Of power and might,
From the hearts of the ancients
Of justice and right.

You were builded from heart-strings
Of fathers of old—
From the dreams of wise sages,
In white and in gold.

You have left us tradition
Unequaled, untold;
And you're all inter-woven
With great things of old.

But, behold! Do not stop with
Tradition and fame,
Build well the rich present—
The past as an aim.

Deep into your vine and your
Moss-covered walls—
Twine the hearts of your students
And past-masters' calls.

And so, when the centuries
Have left today night,
Will haunt you in spirits
Of orange and white. —R. E. K.
