"Fishing as a Great Sport" and "Fishing as a Business" are two fundamentally different approaches to the sport of fishing. The former focuses on the recreational aspects of fishing, while the latter is more concerned with the economic aspects. This distinction is crucial in understanding how fishing can be perceived differently by different individuals and groups.

If the pictures can be believed, it was a boy's day at the Oregon State Penitentiary last Saturday. Over 900 thousand inmates and their families were on hand to enjoy the 15th annual prison fishing derby. The event was a huge success, with over 100 thousand fish caught and released back into the water.

"Got a fish?" asked his partner. "Yes, got a fish." "And that's engaged." "Yeah, got a fish." "Gone is the blue imp."

"Fat!" quipped the old lady. "Yeah, gone is the blue imp." "What's the matter with you?" "Yeah, gone is the blue imp." "What's the matter with you?"

Train Traveling.

Mr. A. H. Thompson, manager of the famous San Francisco stock market, has officially reported that the famous transcontinental train is back in service. This train was the first to link the East and West Coasts of the United States, and it has been an important part of American transportation ever since.

Did you ever notice the "Underground" part of the train? That's where the passengers are stored during the trip. It's a unique feature of this train that attracts many curious travelers.

A good old Scotch story by being long and winding, it is a little story of a man who was born in the British Isles and who later emigrated to America. One night, he was talking with a friend about his homeland and how much he missed the old country. "I wish I could go back," he said. "I wish I could see my homeland again." His friend then asked, "Why don't you go back?" "Because I don't have the money," he replied. "I wish I could go back," he said again. "I wish I could see my homeland again."
