Dear Sir,

I have sought to comply with your request in forwarding you a copy of the report in the case of Giles v. Declarer. But have been unable to do so. The subject has been definitively decided of, and I hope that the resolution which you will experience will not be disagreeable. Of the plan which you have submitted, the petition was duly received and the petition accordingly presented. I addressed letters containing those which were forwarded to the party for whom they were designed, and two days since received an answer made out in full from your local agent, who is living in Hamilton. The same appears to me to be satisfactory, all is from the letter of the day at which the claim isvoid. I fear that we shall not be able to act definitively upon this year. What ever can be done however I will cheerfully do.

We are debating the Indian question as it is called. With the moment of termination, the discussion to day. Their removal beyond the Mississippi is called for by considerations not only of great public policy, but out of regard to the Indians themselves. Their extinction is inevitable when they grow to a certain size.

The constitution has taken much better than I had apprehended. The small country of my late destined go for it by large majorities, all with the exception of little Drummond. Her course is natural enough. Nothing is more natural than that she should seek to avoid political annihilation. I trusted like that the new spot may be found to act well when it shall have been put into operation. The low-country will very soon find it to be its interest to foster a friendly feeling by cherishing the interests of your region of the State. For myself I am a Virginian, and my affections are not limited to the old or the trans-Alleghany country. Nothing short of old Virginia will satisfy my affections. Heaven grant that this may be the feeling of all of our fellow-citizens. That they are yours, and in every act of satisfaction,

I tender the assurance of respect and esteem,

I am, in honest friendship,

John Tyler

Mr. Morgan,

P.S. An impeachment is ordered by the H. of R.

Judge Pick - The decision took place to-day since the above was written. The Senate will be satisfied of it on Monday. Whether the case will be tried during this session or not is doubtful. It is understood they are said to be in Missouri and this may cause a postponement of the case until the next session. The impeachment is voted by 123 to 41 or 2 - we have but this moment passed the Indian Bill to its 3d reading by a vote of 235 to 19. Should the H. of R. act expeditiously on this subject we may adjourn on the 17th - all depends on that.

J. T.
