Phila Aug 17 53

My dear Sir,

I am at present three weeks in town in regard to the great business but I think it is now due you to say that I desire earnestly to write to you on the concern you shall take for my affairs, and to express my sincere thanks for you assistance.

I have been in the North forty three years, and I am not a writer as you will see so far as I am but of my humble condition, I wish to make it appear more practical justice than I have only care prevail on you to do to breathe not a syllable but shall be very glad to hear from you again.

I write now merely to frame not a suggestion but shall be very glad to hear from you again.
The subject as well as the Vickery as you found has thought better to move him to the Presidential game.

Massachusetts will come here and other New England States or perhaps Indiana.
For they propose an effort will be made to concentrate the New England and New Western voice on Mr. Bright.

Read these in the present journey to further discuss.

There is no matter what it can all against good. Why why should Washington, then?

without a President President I presume. Why not have the Democratic party represented in Congress.
I entirely agree with your statement that the representation of a delegate from a Democratic legislature would be at a disadvantage to a delegate from a Republican legislature.

The Speaker of the House, if such a case would be admitted to the legislature, is just as fair a presiding officer as 48 or 50 of them.

The Constitution of 1832, which establishes the 96 votes from the 81 delegate states, was rejected by a combination of states that never met. The democratic party has never set the democratic party. Its principles are the principles of a candidate for the office of party, against the people of every party and alone.

You will be right to insist that the principle be inserted in the Constitution on the adoption of the Constitution. I do not agree with you here, but I hope we can come to a middle ground by way of compromise.
Their success has now given me a memorable of power, but to the Southern Rebellion. The South is a land of Uncle Sam's and the North is the land of liberty. The Democratic have lost a few percent protection, but in the long run, the North is sure to win.

The North is much to blame, from the North to the South.

But I have no leisure to attend to my writing. In the North, hate is strong. I hope you find peace.

End of the letter.

I hope Mrs. Jane is well. My family are all well. What are your intentions in the fall and your plans to support the Union?
