Dear Sir,

May I be permitted to introduce to your acquaintance and to commend to your polite attention the bearer of this my brother's father-in-law, Professor Wellington, who will visit your city while journeying through the United States?

I here feel extremely indebted to you for any attention you may have been during his stay in New York, attentions which I most sincerely assure you I shall at all times derive a pleasure from paying to any friend of yours.

As Professor Wellington will no doubt be known to you by reputation, there need not be any other pleasure. Have otherwise at my writing you personally acquainted with him.

Yours very faithfully and obediently,

My dear Sir,

Will you permit me to throw the honor of introducing a young acquaintance and my recommendation to your notice? Attention is the honor of the young brother's father-in-law, Professor Wellington.
He will pass through the United States in his way to Mexico, then leaves for some years. I have a feeling that you might be interested in the Professor, who has written an extensive work on philosophy. It would be my pleasure to recommend him to you.

Professor Wellington is a man of great ability and well-known in the field of philosophy. I believe he would be of great interest to you as well. I am certain that you will find him worthwhile to meet. I have arranged for you with an opportunity of becoming personally acquainted with him.

I have written to Professor Wellington recommending him to take the South American region of his travels as his next stop. He has been very interested in the region's opportunities for advancement and development. I am certain he will find it rewarding.

I write to you with the hope that you will find this introduction useful. Please let me know if you have any further questions or need assistance in procuring information about the subject.

I remain, my dear Sir,

Your very faithful,

Charles Wellington

My dear Sir,

Permit me to introduce to your acquaintance, and to recommend to your special attention, the bearer of this my brother's letter—Mr. Thomas Wellman, who will probably pass through the State of North Carolina on his return from Mexico.

I am sure much indebted to you if you will have the kindness to send on so many of your Euphorbia plant as you have promised. Information respecting it would be of the greatest importance.

Our friends at Richmond, to whom I have had much pleasure in seeing that your enterprise was satisfactory, has not given his letter to me until I write to you. It is in the hope, however, that there may be much more to follow.

I am, my dear Sir,

Yours very faithfully,
