March 1965

My dear May,

I returned yesterday from New York, where delegates from the city of Baltimore, I believe had been holding a meeting to consider what to do regarding the opening date of the American Freedmen's Aid Four Million.

The second article of the Constitution will soon be one object. It is a fine country so far as the movement for the black man, to take it out of the power in which it has been worked by men unfitted to take it in. Its health is a big mistake and hurt the planet upon which it exists.
This is not - except incidently - uncertain - an illogical development, it is a reconstructive movement. It is to re- organize the motive of the past - a task in a better basis - a re-integrate solution there.

The movement is the Anti-Slavery Movement. Abraham Lincoln. The am. freedom and sec. freedom is the free. - A chart - he is the son of the Am. Anti-Slave Society.

The American Anti-Slavery Society - is such a form which many such a name would be established - and felt into the good work and further with all of the National Anti-Slave Society and especially of Wendell Phillips. Sanborn is the person whom should be its editor.

Our center of action will be New York. Judge Land is on hand, and with a permanent attachment that he made. Wendell Phillips. Sanborn is the secretary for him.

We shall introduce ourselves to the world in a week or two by an address in the second week of May by a grand 'Anti-Slave Society' meeting in New York to be addressed by Phillips, Brookes, H.T. Black, and others.
