Flat Hat Policy

Any change in the editorial control of a paper necessarily involves a considerable amount of anxiety. "Editorials" who in their previous experience in writing a volume has found himself consistently at variance with large portions of "the editorial body and administration, can not but recognize the discouragement which may be felt new in many circles." Although not inclined to sympathetic, I shall at least be ready to be fair.

First and foremost, this paper has been, and will be a proponent and defender of freedom. Sensationalism, the exploitation of distress for petty policies and extractions, the suggestion of fault and evil, the incitement of the people to yıkıng, should be neither permitted nor tolerated. In short, what is termed as "the vox populi," we should take every care to avoid.

Second, throughout the year, we will be made a sacrifice to the high-water mark. To this end, financial giving will be made, facts, figures, and recommendations made in discussion. To be known that others than those actually connected with the FLAT HAT continue to make the most of ideas which this paper should be. "Propaganda" column will always be open to those with an idea and a fair desire of mastery of English 100.

Finally, letters to the editor—anything but one—will be published with the few possible exceptions that may happen. This column's influence must remain as the free and fair voice of the student body.

Mr. R. D. M. Day (dean of the Williams College course) was shown several minutes ago by several of the men in the campus in a recent en-

The film shows some persons among others who were shown accidentally.

In the film were scenes about several years ago when there were five women students in the typical story of a woman who belonged to Williams, and one of Virginia, and scenes photograph after the Hollywood first triping up the ack by the Redistribution.

There were scenes of the Capitol, Palace, and Palace Gardens. The school has always with its usual droll of all top students always going to the best in the last top classes.

The Flat Hat

By E.L. DONOHUE

"Night Must Fall" is being held in the Pullman Theatre again tonight. I worked down fairly late and with my songs, "Paris" and "Once More" in my pockets, I sat down in the theatre to listen to the music and then I was glad to go. It has been said that we would have to leave the theatre at once, but I know that he has been here. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to stop the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop. I was not afraid to leave the theatre and I was happy to stop.
