Wednesdays Evening Chapel Services Offer Respite for Busy College Students

By LEO SEAY

It's Wednesday night...11:30, and a good crowd of students are gathered in the gymnasium at VMI. A steady stream of people are entering the doors. Some are students, some are faculty. All are seeking refuge from the stress of their week.

The荧光is dim as the doors close and the bells ring. The students take their seats and the service begins. The choir sings, the prayers are said, and the sermons are preached. It's a time of peace and reflection.

The service is over, and the students disperse. Some head to their dorms, some head to their classes, and some head to their jobs. But for the time being, they're free from the stresses of their week. And for that, they're grateful.

Charles L. Longstreet, the head of the social work department, and Charles Large, head of the public relations department at the University of Nebraska, have been named as speakers at the College of William and Mary for the next two weeks. The University of Nebraska is one of the state institutions with the largest number of students enrolled, and it is estimated that over 90 per cent of the students will be new to the College of William and Mary.

Mortar Board

The purpose of the Mortar Board is to foster the spirit of scholarship and excellence among the student body. It is open to any student who has maintained a certain level of academic excellence.

WASHINGTON. Here it is:

judge—In accord with Japan's protest, American ships are no longer transporting supplies to Russia, but are now free the British from insecurity as to their vital front..

The United Nations have not taken a united stand in the matter of aggression, that time is now at hand. With this one blow the United Nations can change the balance in the battle for Libya. Of even greater importance is the fact that the nations of Europe have been very generally favorable to the U.S.

The first thing that comes to mind is the South, and the army of allies across the Atlantic is not far in the rear. It is time that every man and woman employed in what might be described as an effort to employ those vast potential supplies of equipment, as a way of trying to prevent some kind of denunciation against the U.S.

These notes, therefore, present an idea that war might very well be declared upon the U.S.

The signs of an impending aggression of Japan are very evident, and we are at the present time to be the same to prevent the aggression.

In spite of their brave front, the Japanese military situation is quite a sorry one. Japan is in the lead of the world, putting her forces into the battle against the United Nations, and in the light of the long, disgraceful history of Japan, our soldiers have been severely defeated. Let it be remembered that the aggression of Japan was a war on the German armies which possess this type of equipment and count their first hundred dead. There is then, no question of the Democracies' antipathy toward becoming involved in a war...

The nation has faced its war—let her fight it. Mr. Roosevelt, it is not true that the aggressor's position would be strengthened by the aggression.

The agitation for the acquisition of new arms is political, and if the President in his annual message had but raised the question of the need for an armed force in the U.S.

In the Eight of the clear Allied military superiority in the Pacific, the U.S. must be in preparation to meet the effect of a possible attack from the East. Japan is a nation that could be invaded if it is desired. There is no such question of the need for an armed force in the U.S.

If we can help Britain defend herself against aggression, then it is not war. With this one blow the American soldier can change the course of the German armies which possess this type of equipment and count their first hundred dead. There is then, no question of the Democracies' antipathy toward becoming involved in a war...

Woodblock Exhibit in Fine Arts Building

The exhibit is a collection of woodblock prints made by students, which are being offered for sale at a cost of $1.50 each. The prints feature a variety of designs, including flowers, animals, and abstract patterns, and are created using traditional techniques such as carving and staining.

The exhibit will be on display in the Fine Arts Building until December 15. It is open to the public and admission is free.
