For over two decades, Chapel services have been a weekly ritual at William and Mary.

The type and number of weekly services have varied during this period of time, but never have they been discontinued, and never have they been held in dormitories.

Before the restoration of the Wren building, compulsory services were held five mornings a week in the then newly completed and empty Chapel. Entrance to the room could be obtained from a desired height only and the benches that faced the walls of the type now set on the lawn in front of the Wren building. When William and Mary's compulsory services were held in Phi Beta Kappa hall. They were still compulsory. In 1931, the weekly evening services in the Chapel, as we know them today, began.

In 1959, the compulsory Chapel service was abolished. Students and faculty could attend the services if they wished, and those that wished to participate did so.

Chapel is no longer compulsory. A student or faculty member attends the half hour service because he wants to, not because he has to. It is no longer a demand on students and faculty members to attend the evening service. Now, the decision to attend is entirely up to the student and faculty member.

The hour for Chapel has been changed from 7:00 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. This will make it convenient to go to the services upon returning from work or school.

It's informal. There are no written invitations to Chapel; you attend when you wish.

Letters to the editor are always welcome, whether the complaints or praises embodied in them are warranted or not. In 1931, the weekly evening services in the Chapel, as we know them today, began.

Minor Holds Talks On Sponsorship

"Excavation of Williamsburg" forms the basis of the weekly talks by Ted H. Minor, Jr., Colonial Williamsburg museum assistant. Held Tuesday evenings in the same room as the Radio club, the talks are illustrated with 50 slides in natural color.

In these talks, sponsored by Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., Mr. Minor discusses the methods of locating and excavating sites of colonial buildings, how remains are found in the ground, methods of preserving and presenting them and the use of the materials recovered. Archaeological discoveries have been responsible for furthering our knowledge of the early foundations excavated yields from 500 pounds to one ton of colonial materials. The material is carefully brushed, washed, and treated as a prehistoric and classified. There are 18 different classifications of the various kinds of colonial buildings, how artifacts, three for brick, marble, and stone, and 10 for miscellaneous articles.

Mr. Minor, a graduate of the College of William and Mary, has been with Colonial Williamsburg since 1938. In 1940 he was placed in charge of the museum and archaeological laboratory.

Counseling Service Offers Students Vocational Aid

By TERRIE HOWE

Every student can profit by concrete information concerning his occupational interests and abilities. Vocational guidance and educational aid are two vital functions of the College counseling service.

As freshmen, all students take a series of tests. These are designed to provide background for counseling conferences later on. The results of the tests are of no value unless they are followed up.

As a result of faculty action, the Counseling Service was established in 1941. Miss Rand, joined the college staff to direct the work. During the war years, Mr. and Mrs. Rand devoted their time to the extensive program which had begun in 1941. Now, however, the service is ready to swing into action again.

Following the war, the Counseling Program made use of the voluntary time of 38 trained faculty members. These professors handle early contacts using the Counseling Office for conferences when time is feasible.

The system of student advising and scheduling for courses is entirely separate from the counseling program. Only specially trained faculty members of the Committee on Counseling are headed by Dr. Charles T. Harrison.

Any student wishing to secure a faculty consultant may go to Washington 2-13 and request an appointment. He may go directly to the counseling office to arrange for personal appointments.

An excellent jumper and ribbons in horse shows at Virginia and North Carolina shows. The system of student advisors continues. Beginning Thursday, Oct. 10, conferences may be scheduled for courses.

Tribe Scores Three Times In First Quarter Osslaught

Except for two quick touchdowns which came in the last half, William and Mary’s Indians had things pretty much their own way in first quarter action against Charleston, S. C., in the first Southern Conference tilt for both clubs.

In the first period of the game, the Tribe was skillfully handled by效率 Magnified, a new life. While the ball was still in the air, Magnified took it on the 10 yard line and ran the ball for six yards, giving the Tribe a 2 to nothing lead after Magnified’s extra point kick. The game continued, and the Tribe was able to gain 11 points more on a Magnified pass to Tom Mikula, who scored on the 8 yard line. Magnified’s extra point was good, giving the Tribe a 11 to nothing lead. The Tribe continued to dominate the game, scoring 25 more points in the second half to take the final score to 36 to nothing.

At Last

Diagnose, the man with the brain.

Those who have seen the performance of Tom Mikula, a left-handed passer, might have expected him to drop back and throw the ball. According to Bob, "in college they play the man in each and in the game they let them know you are back there." The Tribe continued, "Dave Clark (left halfback) was told not to. If I couldn’t get the man over at N. C., I would change more. I told him we couldn’t pay what they charged for the game.”

In commenting on those words, Bob said, "the game was dominated by Tom Mikula, who performed superbly, but the game was also won by the defense of the Tribe, who held the ball to a minimum. The Tribe’s defense, under the leadership of Magnified, was superb, holding the ball to a minimum of two points in the second half.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch, suggested that Tensasaw add a fewنجيفات to the catalogue of the game. "It seems to us, however, that Magnified was the one who should have been called on to kick the ball, but he was not.”

Tensasaw was not pleased with the result of the game, but he was content with the performance of his team. "We were not happy about the result of the game, but we were happy with the performance of our team. Magnified was the one who should have been called on to kick the ball, but he was not.”

Injuries Cripple Team

The loss of Dick McCoy caused the Tribe to change its strategy, according to Bob. "The Tribe was not happy about the result of the game, but we were happy with the performance of our team. Magnified was the one who should have been called on to kick the ball, but he was not.”

Beaver College Features Tough Hockey Schedule

Facing the hardest opposition of its schedule, the Beaver and William and Mary hockey teams will meet this Saturday night against Beaver College in a home game, the official said.

Beaver is certain to put on the field a well-trained team, skilled in their hitting and blocking, to bring the battle into the cage. The Philadelphia spirituals are expected to emerge by sending over two teams to play against Beaver College. It is understood that, after practices have been held since the opening of college.

Lack of Practice

The Beaver team, composed of storebears, has gotten together only seven times during the season, according to the tutelage of Coach Martha E. Bermudez, the squad is going as a team three days a week. On other days, the girls concentrate on individual skills and techniques.

Eight members of last year's varsity have returned this year. Of these, five captured berths on the squad seven top players of Virginia in the South-East tournament.

These returns should add strength to the opposing team, and should give the new Beaver team a chance to be successful against the approaching game with Beaver. The Northerners, however, find themselves in the same fortunate position with practically all of their team back, and the Beaver will be in the same position.

WAA Rules Announced

Miss Barkalock has not yet announced the varsity players. The selected women are not the customary team from the class of all girls. In the classes of Maddy Henry, Alice Wood, "Pinky" Smith, "Jimmie" Murphy and June Ann Higg. The left return, left fullback and goalie positions are still vacant, but practices are growing strongly candidates to take the front.

The remainder of the hockey schedule is entirely tentatively. Manager "Hockey" Hochstrasser has announced that the squad is trying to arrange a warm-up with Farmingdale State Teachers Colleges preceding the Beaver match. On November 4, the squad will have a slight "breather" with the Richmond Division. Both of the contests will be home games. The first game on November 8 and 9, the Squaws will take part in the Virginia Tournament. During the course of the meet, they will probably engage sweetEntr. The Richmond Hockey Club and Westhampton College. All of these teams will provide tough opposition for the Williamsburg squad. The hockey bearing all South-East players, besides the Eubanks, who, who belongs to a great American fullback.

Warsham has always fielded a strong eleven. Last year, the Richmonders balanced the Squaws in a seesaw game ending in a tie.

WAA Rule Affects All Varsity Players

Following are the rules for winter and spring competition, which are results of recommendations of the Monogram Club to the Joint committee of women's athletics.

No player currently member a member of other sports varsity shall be considered ineligible unless he has tried unsuccessfully for the varsity.

Return "Member," a former member, a member of some other college varsity shall be considered ineligible unless the player has tried unsuccessfully for the varsity.

Arena: When schedule conflicts are involved, a small squad of superior players may be requested to limit their participation to varsity sports. The squad, which means the demands of both schedule and position, is not a full practice group.

Ineligibility: All problems are decided by the Intramural Executive Committee (Staff and students of intramural, manager of the sport, and a representative from the Monogram Club). All problems should be submitted.

Library Acquires Additional Books
Among the new additions to the College library are Marilyn Frazee in the Classroom by Wood and Freeman, Industrial Measurements by Kraus and Thomson, Railroad Signal, American Men of Letters by Clarke, and The Best Plays of 1944-45.

These books, along with a number of others, are on the rotating display of the new acquisitions and will appear in the entrance to the Student reading room on the main floor. Robert H. Land, associate librarian, said that he feels the shelf, with its collection of the latest books, covers such a wide variety of subjects that it will provide students with interesting and enjoyable reading material for classroom and recreational purposes.

Mr. Land recently returned from Virginia where he completed the four months at the University of Virginia to resume his duties as associate librarian.

He has been on a leave of absence for four months at the University of Michigan where he completed the requirements for his Ph. D. in the field of history.

Restoration Adds Nautical Display

Colonial Williamsburg, Inc. has put on display a nautical exhibition borrowed from the Mariners' Museum at Newport News, Va. The exhibit, located in the Williamsburg Inn Garden Room, consists of three full, model of the clipper ship "Henry R. Hyde," and watercolor drawings of two of Williamsburg's most famous "Colonial" and the "President."

Built in Bath, Maine, in 1845, the "Henry R. Hyde" was 287 long and displaced 2,585 tons. The clipper ship sailed around the world five times before being sold to San Francisco in 1899 when she entered the coast trade, joining at Norfolk and Baltimore for the west coast. In 1904 she was driven ashore at Virginia Beach. The model of this ship follows the intricate rigging of the ship microbiology, and is complete in almost every detail with the original, according to Restoration officials.

The President," a 44 gun ship, was flagship of the American squadron under Captain Stephen Decatur in 1810. Captained by Charles Stewart in 1819, the ship was famous as a Constitution" bore long 32-pound and 25-pound cannonballs.

In the interest of bringing the veterans nearer the rest of the college students, in outlook and social events, The FLAT HAT will print this column weekly, publishing constructive criticism offered by veterans.

This week, veterans were asked what they thought could be improved here on the campus.

American Legion: One of the most urgent problems of the school is the repair of Mattacka Park. Due to pressing labor problems, it seems a necessity to utilize student skills in this project.

Bill Snelling: The fact of the matter, is, I'm happy.

Floyd Smith: I am all for living in fraternity houses. The value of the fraternity system is lost under this present set-up.

Norman Martin: A man 31 years of age, fully responsible under the law, should be allowed to keep his own car here at the College, without having to be checked out through the Dean's Office.

Bob Sanford: I think that girls should be allowed to swim in Blow Gym swimming pool with the men during the afternoon.

Bonnie Green Sees Europe With Youth Hostel Group

Post-war trips to Europe have begun, adding to the ever increasing admissions that the war is really over. Bonnie Green, traveling with the A.Y.H. American Youth Hostel group, made a peace-time trip abroad.

The Hostel groups travel by bicycle, canoe, horse, and on foot, staying overnight at farm houses and hostel centers. The purpose is to enable young people to see all parts of the world, and to meet and live with all nationalism.

Bonnie's group was the first to make a post-war trip. There were one hundred American boys and girls, mostly college students, in this group, which cycled through Belgium, Luxembourg, Holland, and France, and touched in the Spanish border.

"Signs of destruction were everywhere," explained Bonnie. "Green fields ten blocks long were all that was left of Rotterdam's main business district.

The European people were fascinating, but the language barrier was hard to overcome. Leighton, Bonnie said, that many small children had picked up American phrases from the C.I.A. Working with a Dutch group, Bonnie helped to clean up a farm house and undernourished children.

"You know, it's amazing how quickly you pick up phrases of a language, when you're living with the people," Bonnie said.

One outstanding European custom was in their interpretation of the woman's place in society. This was particularly noticeable in the rural sections where the women waited on the men, sometimes not eating themselves if the men had been too ravenous.

"We took our own food over, but traded it with the people, as it was costing and could be used this winter," Bonnie said. "Most of the time we ate their fare, which consisted of potatoes, bread, and macaroni." By European standards, this is a normal diet.

Every French man I saw wore a beret; and the poorer class of shoes. I wore them, too, to keep the language, when you're living with their class standing but who think they are seniors to attend the meeting.

Seniors To Elect Officers At Meet

Plans for senior class participation in homecoming activities, the senior gift, and a class dance will be made at a compulsory meeting of the class at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, Oct. 8, in Washington 260, according to Bert Runyon, president. Elections for class historian, class port, senior marshals, and a permanent secretary will also be held.

"Providing all seniors attend this first meeting tonight, it will eliminate the frequency of frequent meetings of the class to the complete program for the first semester may be organized at this one meeting," stated Bert. He urges all seniors who are uncertain of their choice entertaining who they think they are seniors to attend the meeting.

Little Time Saved By Cutting Campus

Today, we dwell in a mechanical world. Nobody is anybody without a mechanical object. We use a mechanical symbolism—or, before that, he had a mechanical pencil, possessing literally the power of requiring human exertion to lengthen the point. Even the distinct cigar-butt-sniper calmly snips his cigarettes mechanically. In short, our minds are intricately linked with laws of physics, chemistry, and mathematics.

In order to restrain the feet of numerous footloose students, campaigns have been inaugurated, urging one and all to refrain from cutting campus, because to do so will only mar the beauty thereof. Obviously this is the wrong approach for, as stated before, the mind dwells upon 2x2=4. There¬fore, instead of extolling the beauty of Wilson’s grounds, this is to be a concrete statement of fact, requiring only the most elementary knowledge of mathematics for absolute proof.

In a recent survey conducted on the campus of Marshall-Wythe and Trinkle Hall, the subject ever cut every possible course in a heroic effort to pick up several minutes here or somewhere else. He was clocked in at 2:57:56. That was the amount of time it took the subject to cover the least ground possible in crossing across the campus back to Marshall-Wythe, whereafter being given several short adrenalin, he was aimed toward the paths this time. His finishing form was perfect, and he was clocked in at the Dining Hall in exactly 2:57:56. Minute calculations demonstrate that it took him exactly 8831 seconds longer to stick to the walks than to cut across the broad expanses of green.

Furthermore, since the subject was singled for light and speed, he was examined to ascertain the strain and strain coexistent upon both forays, one by paths across the campus and one by time-honored written words. The Horse-Power Consumed rating for the first was .000058 horsepower; and, for the second, the rating read .000066, giving reason to the deduction that it only takes .0001 h.p. more to stick to the walks. This expanded horse-power may be re¬served merely through eating one more sugary roll at dinner.
