College is primarily an educational institution in life. Yet few of the students seem to realize that it deals with the course they take with the desire to change the curriculum. It was with some surprise that I found this text last week printed two letters dealing with this subject. There should be a steady stream of definite suggestions for improvements or additional courses, coming from every student body.

It's Your Education

These recommendations should be written down and handed to Dr. William Bruce, who is chairman of the Committee on Curriculum. Individual groups cannot be heard by the committee and most often are not given the opportunity to change. In a case where a large number of students feel the need of a certain subject, a formal petition would certainly get some attention.

To answer some students, their change is being tried. The psychology department, under the direction of Dr. Royal Embree, is in charge of a voluntary program of self-suggestion and programming. This is in addition to the curriculum that will measure student support.

There have been half-hearted proposals that there should be courses given in vocabulary and speech enrichment, since they are of a very religious philosophy, reflect American literature, and further work in the mechanical science. So far, there has been no organized request for any of these.

The faculty wants student ideas and support. Constructive criticism is a healthy sign. The machinery is there and it is your education. If you want changes go after them in a positive manner.

Letter To The Editor:

Give a Rousing Cheer

Buddy Law: "School spirit at William and Mary isn't very high. Why?"

Thompson: "The students aren't knocking themselves out to give a rousing cheer.

There is still one more game to be played this year, and that game promises to be one of our toughest. The University of Richmond is really going to make this a battle for the championship. We were in Richmond last week and it was quite a game. We lost, but I don't think we were outplayed."

Jack Bruce: "If we're to beat Richmond, we need to have more spirit than we had against William and Mary last week and I don't mean 'boiled talking'."

It's about time the administration and students realized the importance of the upcoming game. It can be won or lost on the eve of it.

Carter Gives Bud (d)lip Bird Free Ride On William And Mary-Go-Round

After attending the College football meeting at the corner Goodwin's the other night, I decided to take the riverwalk on my way back to the dormitory. As I reached the front steps of Goodwin's, a small bird stepped out of the bushes and onto the walkway. The bird had a bright red breast and appeared to be very shy. When I was sure he was firmly seated, I walked on.

Not until I had reached the New River did I notice that a flock of more than a dozen birds were following me. I wondered if he might ride that far on my shoulder and was surprised when he did. When I was sure he was firmly seated, I walked on.

The bird followed me for a short distance, but then suddenly turned and flew away. It was a very pretty sight to see the bird flying over the river. It was a very enjoyable experience and I would encourage others to try it if they get a chance to do so.

It certainly helps school spirit at William and Mary:

Hank Blanc: "It takes more than various members of the football team. And to have the band and cheerleaders in the stands while brave little bands to the left, it's friendly, there's right much to do and we are very much experiencing it."

I don't think I would be writing to the editor about the possibility of extending the limits of the College grounds now, but I did want to say something about it. The College has always been a very pleasant place to be and I think it would be even more so if the board of visitors could extend its traditional policy of extending the limits of the College grounds now.

Fritchard Takes Up The Cadges

For Fraternity Houses

A story for all little boys and little girls:

Once upon a time there were 11 little boys who all went to the Mary and Army-sponsored Little Boys' Club in Richmond. Each had a little club house in his yard which he and his friends used to play in.

On the day these little boys had wonderful times in their club houses; they built model airplanes, they made model automobiles, they played ball games.

There were nine little girls in the same neighborhood who had their little club houses, too. But the little girls were never allowed to play in the boys' club houses; they had their own clubs, of course.

However, the little girls were very happy children and they never wanted to be alone. They also loved to play with the boys. All of them had their own club houses.

One evening in the month of September a group of little boys and little girls got upset about the boys not letting them into the boys' club houses. The Mothers pointed out that the little boys were unhappy and that they were not able to see in their own homes. So the little girls said, "We are not the only ones who want to play with each other."

The little boys went to see the Mothers and told them that their club houses were taken away from them. They were afraid of these threats so they asked the Mothers to listen to them. The Mothers pointed out that the little girls were upset and that they had their own houses, too. Their club houses were not theirs at all. They were just like the boys' club houses.

The little boys came home the next day to find that the Mothers had told the Mothers to listen to them. The Mothers said that they would not let the little boys play with the little girls because they felt they could not understand each other. The little boys cried and said that they did not need their own club houses when the little boys couldn't keep them.

Open Letter To The Students:

Disgrace Of Student Government

The faculty at William and Mary is of the opinion that all of the students are behind them.

Jackie Freeman: "I certainly hope the boys that the students are behind them."

Carter G. Goodwin: "It's about time that the College student government make a public statement about this situation. If we're to beat Richmond, we need to have more spirit than we had against William and Mary last week and I don't mean 'boiled talking'."

Open Letter To Our Followers: Dear Students,
There have been many complaints lately about this column. Some people are unhappy because their names are not mentioned. And some people feel that there are not enough names mentioned. Therefore, in order to make this column as impartial as possible, we have devised this simple solution. If you are one of the above three types of people, we would appreciate your cooperation. Beginning next week, there will be a column in the Publications office in which your names are mentioned. And some people feel that there are not enough names mentioned. Tommy Korczowski, After Great Beginning, Posts Remarkable Collegiate Grid Record

By H. REID

The Rube was in one of his moodier moods. He had a right to be. Columbia College had just pulled two time worth plays—the Statue of Liberty—on William and Mary, scoring a result of one of them, and the Carolinas licked McCaw's chargers but good in what was supposed to have been a warmup game for William and Mary at the start of last season.

Nobody in the stands paid too much attention to a bandy-legged, short, little fellow with a big name. They figured he was a replacement. But the Incredible small back swivel-hedged and dodged his way over the last stripe not once, but three times before the Catawbans—or anybody else, for that matter, for that matter, for that matter—would look up. Ralston, Richmond, and Jack Wilbourne—three of the deadlocks or, three were placed on the third string. Bob Steckroth and Knox Ramsey, both of whom have turned in performances all season, were relegated to the second string.

One other Korczowski

Korczowski is a familiar name at William and Mary. Tommy's uncle, Johny, was a player unknown in 1942, in which season the younger Korczowski was the Southern Conference pace maker of rushing. It was largely because of Johny that Tommy decided to enter William and Mary.

This season, Tommy is still going like a house afire. He is leading in rushing. His high school average reads something like 42.9 yards, and his last year's collegiate record is of the same caliber. Scoring from the New York Giants, the Boston Red Sox and the Giants finished as a team. Average of 40 yards a try, Tommy, who co-represented the team, often reached 20 yards.

After the cornerback made the first half of the season because of injuries, will be in good shape for the Thanksgiving battle.

Tribe, Spiders To Meet For State Title

Richmond Record Shows
Six Wins, Two Deadlocks

Having seen their hopes of the Southern Conference title evaporate as a result of North Carolina's victory over Duke, the Indians took up the University of Richmond on Thursday at 2 p.m. at the Richmond Athletic Monument in a game which will decide the State championship.

To compare with the Tribe's mark of seven victories and two defeats, the Spiders have a record of six wins and a pair of ties in nine games on the gridiron. Of these, they have taken care of Randolph-Macon, George Washington, V. P. I., and Mary, with the only losses coming against Duke and V. P. I., both contests ending with 7-7 scores.

Successful Season

Under the tutelage of Coach Johnny Fenlon, Richmond has shown what was happening. The Red and Blue are more than once touchdown this season, because of a broken collar bone, which he suffered at the same game with T. P. F. and possibly

TRIBETOPICS By ED GRIFFIN

With the finale of every William and Mary football season, the pre-season setting up day with the University of Richmond, being just a few hours away, it seems a good move to introduce this column's faithful followers of a few facts which have been garnered in the past performances.

Richmond won the opening contest in 1958 by a 15-0 count and gaining momentum, hammered out a 40-0 decision in the second contest. There was no game in 1919, the largest total of the entire season, 77-11. After a lapse of two years, the Indians finally captured their initial victory in 1924, handled by 48-0 score. Ever since that time the series has been broken, except in 1943 when William and Mary had only one informer team.

Six Indians have come out on top 25 times, the Tribe has won 21 games and three have ended in ties. Therefore, an Indian victory on Thursday would make all their work even and put both elevens right back where they started, as far as superiority is concerned.

Five games set for 15 for W&M and 14 for the Red and Blue. Two of the deadlocks, the 1917 teams and the first game in 1960, were scoreless. Two tilts took place in the latter year and in 1905, were scoreless. Two tilts took place in the latter year and in 1919. The Braves whitewashed their foes, 4-0, in 1905 and 7-0 in '19.

Spider B Team Wins To Indians, 31 to 25

In a warm up for the traditions, the Big Reds went on to win over the Indians, 31 to 25, on Thursday. Williams and Mary Ann, Richard, the B squads of the two schools met in Jefferson, the Tribe Rials held the game out of the fire in the first quarter, 20-1-0. The Indians literally beat the Big Reds at its own game. Since the previous week, when they had been practicing the Rich­mond version of the 7-5 spot, the Indians pulled the game out of the fire in the first quarter, 20-1-0. In the second quarter, the Indians kept up the pressure of the big game, and covered the Big Reds from the end of the game.

Prospective Officials Sought By Co-ed Board

The Squaws will open the season Oct. 10, in Washington 100. Miss Hardman of the Department of Athletics, president, and Dr. Caroline B. Sinclair led the discussion on the rule.

With basketball intramurals begin­ning soon, a drive for recruiting officials is being mounted. Each group playing basketball is urged to have several members of the organization participate as officials. This is especially true in the girls' and co-ed leagues. Interested are requested to contact the co-ed board, or the gymnastics board of directors.

Intramural Grid Champions Still Remain To Be Decided

As the two football leagues enter the last few weeks of the season, the winners in each remain undetermined. In the Independent League, three teams are deadlocked for fifth place with 4-2 records. Vet's Dorm joined last week's leaders, the Smart Boys and the Go Getters, when they clipped Richmond Road, 7-0.

In the first league place was already made for the big game of the season between the Squaws and the Big Reds. Despite their difficult schedule, the Squaws are in second, a win away from the top spot in the independent league. In the final standings for the conventional league, the Squaws will be out to avenge a defeat.

Freshmen Capture Honors In Hook

Winning two straight contention over the sophomore and victorious in the doubles match over the junior-senior doubles, the freshman class dominated the Sophomore class. The freshmen class won the individual college hockey championship title.

In the first engagement between the freshmen and sophomores the freshmen came out on top. On the second game, girls were evenly matched and Wilkie, and Dibey won the title for the seniors with a 2-1 victory over their opponents.

Bridge Intramurals will begin Dec. 2. Further information can be obtained on the board outside Jefferson.

Prospective Officials Sought By Co-ed Board

The Squaws will open the season Oct. 10, in Washington 100. Miss Hardman of the Department of Athletics, president, and Dr. Caroline B. Sinclair led the discussion on the rule.

With basketball intramurals begin­ning soon, a drive for recruiting officials is being mounted. Each group playing basketball is urged to have several members of the organization participate as officials. This is especially true in the girls' and co-ed leagues. Interested are requested to contact the co-ed board, or the gymnastics board of directors.

Intramural Grid Champions Still Remain To Be Decided

As the two football leagues enter the last few weeks of the season, the winners in each remain undetermined. In the Independent League, three teams are deadlocked for fifth place with 4-2 records. Vet's Dorm joined last week's leaders, the Smart Boys and the Go Getters, when they clipped Richmond Road, 7-0.

In the first league place was already made for the big game of the season between the Squaws and the Big Reds. Despite their difficult schedule, the Squaws are in second, a win away from the top spot in the independent league. In the final standings for the conventional league, the Squaws will be out to avenge a defeat.
