18th Century Chamber Music

Kirkpatrick in Gov. Palace

A festival of 18th century chamber music sponsored by the Governor's Executive Office. The program aims to highlight the musical heritage of the era and foster a deeper appreciation for classical music. The performances will take place at various venues, including the Governor's Palace, providing a unique and engaging experience for music lovers.

18th century chamber music will be performed throughout the day. There will be a variety of concerts featuring different ensembles, each showcasing the depth and beauty of the music from this time period. Attendees can expect a vibrant and cultural atmosphere, with performances held in historic settings.

May Festival

15th century music at Fordham University.

The music of Great Britain, a collection of certain compositions that were never heard before. This collection is the most striking feature of the festival of the last few years. It was some time later that the students were ready for their last and independent work.

A preview into the field of 15th century music has been offered by Edward Hartshorne, who has been the author of several books on this subject. This has been an invaluable tool in preparing the students for their own work.

Bartlett and his staff have also been active in the preparation of the festival. Their names are always on the lips of those who have attended previous festivals.

The college has been designed to provide a harmonious, safe, and nutritious environment.

The program is to be given by the Williamsburg Faculty. It is the first in the Spring Festival of Music, a summer music season which produces concerts of the highest quality.

Mr. Kirkpatrick has just come from New York where he played in the famous "Grand Hotel" and has invited the musicians to perform at the assembly of the faculty from the college. The program is to be held between concerts. The faculty is to consist of the four members of the faculty, the three of whom are to be students of the college, and the other who is to be a member of the faculty from New York.

The players who have been in other William and Mary productions are finding this coming performance a delight to rehearse. The theme of the evening will be "The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co." and is the subject of a short essay that the players have been working on. It is a theme that is only appropriate to our times. The essay is to be published in the next issue of the Williamsburg Gazette.

The column is not yet ready, but it is on its way. The column is to be published in the next issue of the Williamsburg Gazette.
