To Pay Or Not To Pay? That Is The Question

Although the 1934-35 football season ended in a tie of both teams, neither the players nor the fans had anything to be worried about. The players got paid and the fans got a good game. But the fans, who got little else, are now beginning to raise the question, "Do we pay or not?"

The answer to that question is simple. It is, "Yes, we do pay."

Every year, the football season brings about a new debate on the subject of paying players. The critics of the practice argue that it is unfair to the students who are not on the team, and that it is a form of corruption. The proponents of the practice argue that it is a necessary part of the game, and that it helps to support the team.

The question is not new. It has been争论ed in one form or another for more than a century. The first debate on the subject was held in 1823, when the University of Pennsylvania announced that it was discontinuing its football program. The move was met with widespread opposition, and the team was reformed a year later. Since then, the debate has continued, with each new season bringing new arguments for and against the practice.

The most significant debate on the subject occurred in 1895, when the University of Chicago announced that it was discontinuing its football program. The move was met with widespread opposition, and the team was reformed a year later. Since then, the debate has continued, with each new season bringing new arguments for and against the practice.

While everyone is reviewing the past year and picking the team that should have won, the coaches are looking ahead to twelve months and a present review of 1941.

January — The Richmond newspaper will publish an issue on the year's accomplishments and the plans for the coming year. The basketball team is expected to be a strong contender.

February — The Tennessee-Southern California game will be broadcast on the radio. The Richmond newspaper will publish a special section on the game and the Richmond athletic department will release state-of-the-art athletic facilities.

March — It will be noticed that while the weather was mild, the local football team played in the rain. The coaches will announce that the team will wear white uniforms for home games and blue uniforms for away games.

April — The rain will be incessant. The coaches will announce that the games will be played on a field covered with ice. The Richmond athletic department will announce the construction of a new indoor field.

May — The football team will find that the season is almost over. The coaches will announce that the team will be in training for the next season.

June — Bucko Jacobs will be the Griffs leading burst. According to Coach Voyles, he will be a star for the coming season.

July and August — Hunting season.

September — The William and Mary Freshmen class will be introduced to the new students. The Richmond athletic department will announce the construction of a new stadium.

October — A "rush" improvement! William and Mary will spurt over in such fashion. The University of Virginia and the College of William and Mary will be in training for the upcoming season.

November — One William and Mary player and one Richmond player will make the All-State team. The Richmond athletic department will announce the construction of a new training facility.

December — The Richmond Christmas special will roll into Washington, D.C., and a bad loss but the coaches will realize that the team will be in training for the new year.

Math. — It will be noticed that while the teams were underdog, the coaches were not.

English — The Richmond athletic department will publish a poem about the team.

Science — The Richmond athletic department will announce the construction of a new laboratory.

Spanish — The Richmond athletic department will announce the construction of a new language laboratory.

Campus Problem

A well known woman's organization on campus recently went through a sort of method of throwing the two groups together in a variety of public relations which might appeal to both of them. Several organizations were matched up on the grounds that they were too far timed and, while their activities would soon occupy. Notably among them was a suggestion to have a "faculty-student hour" at Brafferton, one day a week. A faculty member would be agreeable topic of conversation which could idea, many of them felt that such an idea idea fell through. It entered into without a spirit of compulsion.

Students have returned. The holidays are over. Both bookings closed as the last day closed a volume, both schools are again in thick. From the casual "vote at the College Club" to the now groups at the College Girls' Aid, the great event of the week was the latest and be merry for tomorrow we flash, hundreds of hands and hundreds more are here another ascetic of book.

Barnyard Philosopher Begins Philosophizing

By Henry C. Williams

All are familiar with the proverb: "Give a man a fish, and you feed him for a day. Teach a man to fish, and you feed him for a lifetime." This maxim is as applicable in the barnyard as it is on the lecture platform. The sturdy, well-honed beak and skillful flip of the barnyard expert, working in tandem, can produce a bumper crop of corn.

By giving a man (or a horse, cow, or chicken) a fish (or a fish pond) and teaching him how to fish, we are truly giving him a lifetime of food. And it is for this reason that the barnyard philosopher begins his lecture tour on the campus of the University of Virginia this week.

The barnyard philosopher has been around for centuries, but his message has never been more relevant. In an age of scientific advancement, it is easy to lose sight of the basics. The barnyard philosopher reminds us that, at its core, farming is about the relationship between the farmer and the land, and the wisdom of the animal can be a valuable guide.

Flasker, the barnyard philosopher, will be discussing a wide range of topics, from the importance of maintaining a healthy ecosystem to the role of animals in our daily lives. His lectures will be held in the university's largest auditorium, and tickets are available at the box office.

Flasker's message is one of hope and inspiration. In a world where technology often seems to be driving us further and further apart, the barnyard philosopher reminds us of the simple pleasures that come with working hand in hand with nature.

So mark your calendars and make sure to catch Flasker's lecture series. It's a rare opportunity to learn from a master, and I know you won't be disappointed.

Flasker's lectures begin tomorrow, so don't miss out. And remember, the best way to learn is to practice, so put those words to work and start your own garden today!

TOWER OF LONDON

A tower of London is not just a monument to the past, but also a living, breathing part of the city's history. The Tower of London is home to a vast collection of art, treasures, and ancient artifacts. It's a place where history comes alive, and where visitors can experience the past in a whole new way.

The Tower of London was once a castle, a prison, a royal palace, and a fortress. It has seen countless battles and wars, and has been home to kings and queens. Today, it is a national treasure, and a symbol of the city's rich history.

The Tower of London is located on the north bank of the River Thames, and is one of the most popular tourist attractions in London. It's a must-visit destination for anyone who wants to learn more about the city's history.

If you're planning a trip to London, make sure to stop by the Tower of London. It's a place you won't want to miss.
